REV. M. H. LYON'S SERMONS FOR SOUTH SIDE EVANGELICAL UNION.

Many Parents Raise Their Children fer Hell Instead of Heaven, the Minister Declares.

The address of the Rev. Milford H. Lyon, who is conducting the services of the South Side Evangelical Union, was last night the finest that he has yet delivered. The meeting was again held in the Edwin Ray Methodist Episcopal Church, as the weather made the occupancy of the big tent on Prospect street impossible. In spite of the disagreeable weather, however, the church was well filled.

Mr. Lyon began last night his series of sermons on "The Ten Commandments." the subject of the first being "The Law of God." The thought that ran through his talk was that people of to-day are idolizing earthly things rather than spiritual. Our idols are our ideals and our ideals in life are usually money, display, pleasure or intellectuality. Mr. Lyon said, in part: "The Lord is just as willing to save us now as He ever was, but never before have cople been so little desirous of salvation. hell instead of for heaven. The government in the home is growing less and less binding on the children. The personal re-sponsibility of parents to God for their children is not felt as it should be. No wonder children are growing up regardless of God's law when there is no regard for

"We have interpreted the liberty to do right to the license to do wrong. The only Anarchist is not the one that gets drunk on poor whisky and waves the red flag. The man who, to increase his millions, is willing to defy the law is as much an Anarchist as the poorer type. The anarchy of body brings anarchy of soul. The same man who is willing to deny the flag of his country is willing to defy his Maker. Bismarck said that Germany could only be saved by blood and iron. What was true of Germany politically is true of America spiritually. We need the blood of Christ, but we need also the iron of law. We need not only the law of love.

but the love of law. 'The first command is of idolatry. What does it mean? Not the idolatry of Calcutta alone, but the idolatry of America. The ideals which men have placed before Jesus Christ are as much idolatry as the wor-ship of stone and wood. The idol of intelctuality has some danger. Education in itself as a means is great, but it cannot be a substitute for Christian character. Other idols-fashion, politics, success, money, society and clubs-must all be guarded against. The worshipers of Mammon are far greater in number than the to power and claims its slaves through as well as through beer. FOOD WON

Case of Appendicitis.

Food cured a well-known Kansas school teacher of appendicitis. "A year ago last July I was taken sick with apepndicitis and was operated upon, being down in bed for nine weeeks, and, although I was given up to die by the doctor and the entire community. I got up again and went back to my work, although a wreck. About the middle of last February I was taken sick the same way, but went to Eureka Springs and stayed for five months, ill all the time and just about half alive. "It was about this time I received a letter from an aunt in Nebraska telling me of what a food called Grape-Nuts had done for her and asking me to try it. I did so, and in a shrort time Grape-Nuts had done me more good than all of the treatments put together. My case is spoken of as one of the most interesting in Kansas, for I spent over $1,000 for medical treatment, and finally had to fall back on food, and am now getting along far better than I have before for several years. I am recuperating rapidly, and getting strong and healthy again. My stomach and bowels are normal, and on the whole I feel like a new man. of studied dietetics in my work as school teacher, but never knew before that the power of pure scientific food could be so I recommend Grape-Nuts to all.

"The canning factories are starting up again." remarked the middle-aged matron. "and yet as much trouble as they save one, and economical and convenient as the canned stuff is, I sometimes look back with a touch of real regret to the days when every preserves. Home-made stuff is going more and more out of fashion every year. Of course, some of the fruit one buys is de licious, but, like the pies mother used to nake, it never seems to get just that oldfashioned richness of flavor. There is a touch of excitement and romance, almost, hovering about those old days, with the crates of red berries, or the baskets of purple plums, or yellow peaches, piled on the kitchen floor, while the girls and boys sat with aprons on and shining pans or yellow pewter bowls in their laps, hulling or pitting or paring, as the case might be, each trying to do more than the rest, with the big porcelain-lined kettle simmering on the stove, sending out a most delicious fragrance of crushed fruit. There was sugar galore, and sticky spoons everywhere, for everyone wanted to 'taste.' Sometimes the neighbors' boys and girls would come in to help, and I've even known a boy to steal a kiss from a pretty girl whose hands were too deep in the fruit to protect herself. It was fun and hard work, too. Yes, I believe if I were an artist I could make a picture of it." And the matron's eyes had grown moist and tender at the retrospect.

Philadelphia Ledger. When Martin Marston reached his home late one night he found on the library table a letter addressed to him in the handwriting of his wife. He opened it, and with deep emotion read as follows:

"My Husband-I am calling you by this name for the last time. I no longer love you and cannot continue to live with you as your wife. When you receive this I shall be many miles away. Do not try to follow me, as I shall never return to your house. "HELEN."

Almost believing that his eyes had deceived him, he again read the letter. His reading was interrupted by a sound at the door. Looking up, he saw his wife. His face lighted up instantly. "Surely," he thought, "she has repented her rash act, and has come back to my home and my love, prepared to ask me to forgive her." "I have come back," she said, "to-" "Then your letter was a cruel mistake," said Marston, "and you do love me?"

"No. Martin, I don't." 'Why, then, why have you come back?" "Well, I forgot to add a postscript to my
